

The Sōdan of Sin

相談 (Sōdan) is a consultation; counselling discussion to exchange advice.

Global interest in rope bondage is growing quickly. Commonly taught from a technical perspective, participants tend towards rapid learning of knots, ties, suspension and transitions, often copying the styles of others, especially Japanese exponents.

Evidence indicates acquisition of technical skills eventually reaches an obstacle where the individual feels unhappy, unfulfilled, even depressed.

By using simple tying exercises, group and individual analysis, participants can build the missing foundations of rope bondage/Kinbaku/Shibari, understanding the core psychological and emotional reasons for restraint.

The Sōdan method is proven to help individuals find their intrinsic approach to advance beyond basic technical rope tying, and onto their own paths.

Sin is an underground hardcore SM Kinbaku performer, Kinbaku Today contributor/interviewer, author of Year of The Bakushi and The Psychology of BDSM & Rope Bondage, and a discrete private practitioner. He began tying his first wife in 1984, finding the SM scene in Japan during the mid-1990s, when a kinky Japanese girlfriend introduced him to Hentai activities. Sin's 'organic' approach helps his enjoyment of his particular Kannōnawa (sensuality; carnality; erotic rope) path.
